

When you need help getting help,
a personal emergency response system (PERS) can assist you in making a call.

Help maintain your independence and still have a sense of security while remaining in your own home.

Lifeline® or Personal Emergency Response Systems (PERS) enable you to call for help from your home with the touch of a button if getting to a telephone is not possible.

Lifeline® and Personal Emergency Response Systems come with a button (worn on a pendant or wristband). Pressing the button automatically connects you to the response center. The response center will respond to your call, often by way of a 2-way voice intercom. The response center will ask what your urgent need is and then will send someone to your aid.
